President's Ponderings...

To War or not to War is the question currently in the forefront.

The question has two major implications:

1. A continuation of the uneasiness of the financial markets and
2. A question of the motives and moral fortitude of our nation's leaders.

The economy seems to be a mixed bag. Certain sectors and companies are doing well while others are struggling. Many decision makers and investors appear to be waiting for a decisive move on the international front before committing resources to investment. The media's focus on the negative news regarding the economy and the world scene fosters the skittishness.

The varying opinions on the issue of our country's moral obligation with regard to Iraq is somewhat perplexing. One and a half years after 9-11 many seem to forget that we are at war and we are vulnerable. Much of the debate is based on opinions formed without information essential to an informed opinion. We have no choice but to trust our leaders to make the decisions in the best interest of our country until we have concrete evidence they are acting otherwise.

Faith in our country, its leaders and the American people is the prescription for a healthy economy and a secure lifestyle.

Paul A. Johnson Jr.

America was established not to create wealth but to realize a vision, to realize an ideal-to discover and maintain liberty among men.
